

BOLSHEVIK BREAKDOWN IN RUSSIA CONTINUES RAPID

Official Advice Received in Washington Tell of Fresh Outbreak in Territory Ruled by the Soviets—Formation of a New Central Government, Patterned After the Form of the United States of America, is Now Regarded Likely by Washington Officials.

Washington, Oct. 1.—A United States State Department spokesman today said Russia is now looked for by officials here as the most likely possibility among the four nations to follow dissolution of the soviet regime.

Official advice today said the bolshheviks were making no rapid continuing in Russia. The movement was in stagnation, which began in the breaking away of the Baltic, Caucasian and Siberian republics. The spokesman said the result of disturbed internal condition, has begun again within the territory ruled

In Russian Turkestan, provinces only loosely knit together in the past are constituting more or less independent governments, the report said. The latest to declare their independence being Khiva and Bokhara.

A new central government roughly after the form of the United States of America. It is believed here, might include even kingdoms such as have been recently established in Turkestan together with the socialistic forms represented by the republics carved out of Siberia and forming now the Far East republic. In such case it was expected the central government might take on the form of the British empire with certain self-governing dominions. Not only would such a plan not violate the principle of self-determination, it was said, but it would

"As Premier Giolitti is regarded some quarters as either incapable or willing to give a strong government, position is shaken and it is regarded doubtful if he will remain long in power."
